Promoters of this year's CRC Speedshow took the show in a slightly different direction by inviting and incorporating a wider and more diverse cross section of the automotive and performance aftermarket; this meant more vendors and more real-time feel to the show overall. This strategy was aimed at creating higher levels of patron satisfaction, and it worked with huge crowds attending.

CRC Speedshow is New Zealand's ultimate car expo for the kiwi family. With 2016 marking 10 years of Speedshow, it was only ever going to be grand...

The event has been a long-running one, celebrating its 10-year anniversary this year, and has managed to evolve into an automotive extravaganza of sorts, offering such a thorough selection of vehicles – from hot rods and muscle cars through to the latest exotic supercars – trade displays, vendor stands and live action events. CRC Speedshow has certainly cemented its position as the car show for the average kiwi family, with enough of a spread – in terms of car types, displays, and attractions – to satisfy everybody. It's the type of show you end up walking through in its entirety, without ever feeling short-changed.

The CRC Speedshow at Auckland's ASB Showgrounds was once again a roaring success. The event was an epic display of automotive goodness, spanning several huge halls, one of which housed the oh-so-shiny Teng Tools Grand National Rod & Custom Show, essentially making the event two shows in one. Anything and everything to do with motoring was at CRC Speedshow: new cars, parts and accessories; motorcycles, classic and contemporary; personal watercraft; and even offroad buggies. Then there was the outdoor arena that was kept busy with RC drone racing, motorcycle stunt riding, drifting and head to head battles between an incredibly varied range of vehicles that even included a drift trike! All in all the CRC Speedshow was a most enjoyable weekend for the whole family. Great pricing, mostly great weather and more than enough eye candy for even the most avid petrol heads.
